BJU REVIEW

BOB JONES University

FALL 1989

MRS. JONES SR. DIES

After several years of declining health, Mrs. Mary Gaston Jones went to be with the Lord on May 12, 1989, at the age of 100. Dr. Monroe Parker preached the memorial service in the Rodeheaver Auditorium, and burial was on the campus beside the grave of Dr. Bob Sr.■

FALL: THE TIME TO VISIT BJU!

We'd love to have you visit us this fall during one of the events we've scheduled especially for you! First there's the High School Festival and the High School Sermon Contest and Workshop, October 31-November 3. The Festival features competition in art, music, and speech and special clinics and workshops with BJU's expert faculty. The Sermon Contest will benefit Christian young men both spiritually and practically.

Many alumni, parents, prospective students and friends have learned that one of the best times to visit the campus is at Thanksgiving. On Thanksgiving Day, you can attend one of three Thanksgiving banquets and see the Turkey Bowl, the University's championship soccer game. During Let's Get Acquainted Days, November 22-26, you'll have an opportunity to visit classes, get to know our students and faculty, enjoy BJU's vibrant Christian atmosphere and participate in lots of special activities. Richard III, Shakespeare's chronicle of tyranny and treachery, will be presented each evening November 22, 23, 24 and 25. On November 24 and 26, the BJU orchestra, combined choirs and soloists will present Brahms' Requiem.

A special College Prep Success Seminar will be held November 24. With sessions from 1 till 5 pm, this seminar offers proven methods and tips for getting ahead in college.

For more information on any of these exciting activities, use the convenient response card in the center of the Review or call (803) 242-5100, extension 3120.■

FIFTY YEARS OF SERVICE

As the 1988-89 school year ended, Dr. Miriam Bonner completed 50 years of teaching at Bob Jones University. A member of the University speech faculty, Dr. Bonner earned her PhD from the University of Michigan in 1941. Her colleagues honored her with a surprise luncheon, and the University recognized her during the special Awards program during Convocation activities.■

STUDY ABROAD PROGRAM SCHEDULED FOR SUMMER OF 1990

Dr. Dwight Gustafson, dean of the School of Fine Arts, will host a 17-day study tour of Europe June 29-July 15, 1990. Participants will visit Belgium, France, Switzerland, Italy, Austria, and Germany. The tour will include concert and opera performances in several European cities as well as the world-famous Oberammergau Passion Play. For information, write Unusual Tours, Bob Jones University, Greenville, SC 29614.■

FACULTY/ STAFF RECOGNIZED BY CITY FOR VOLUNTEER WORK

Four faculty and staff members have been recognized for their volunteer work in the local area.

Dr. Grace Collins, member of the English department and chairman of the department of linguistics, was honored for her work on the board of directors of the Greenville Transit Authority.

Miss Joyce Parks of the speech faculty was recognized as a member of Greenville's Election Commission, which has the responsibility of ensuring fair elections in the city.

Miss Veda Jury, a member of the physical education department, was cited for her work with the American Red Cross.

Brian Donnelly of the BJU public safety department received recognition for his work with the Greenville Explorers, cadet post 817, a division of the Boy Scouts working with the Greenville County Sheriff's Department.■

STUDENT AWARDS

Richard Joel Lauer, a senior history major, was selected to present his senior history paper at the Charles W. Coolidge Honorary Symposium sponsored by the Graduate History Association of the University of South Carolina.

David Oliver of Greenville, SC, was the first-place winner in men's voice at the regional competition of the National Association of Teachers of Singing.

Vicki Hall, a junior majoring in office administration, has won a $500 scholarship from the Greenville chapter of the Professional Secretaries International.

Mercedes K. Peck, a 1989 graduate of Bob Jones Academy, was granted a National Merit scholarship under the corporate sponsorship of the McGraw-Hill Foundation. One of 19 recipients from South Carolina, Krissi was selected on the basis of test scores, high school course work, extracurricular activities, school recommendations and a personal essay.

David Burkhardt, a cinema major from Kansas City, MO, has received a merit award in the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Sixteenth Annual Student Film Awards competition. Dave received the award for his senior cinema project, a 12-minute documentary about an 1879 railroad company in Georgia.■

1990 WORLD CONGRESS OF FUNDAMENTALISTS TO MEET IN LONDON

It's not too early to make your plans to attend next summer's World Congress of Fundamentalists meeting July 16-20 in Westminster Central Hall, London, England, near the Houses of Parliament.

Taking as its theme "The Living Word for a Dying World," the Congress will address topics such as evangelism, apostasy and the defense of the faith and will include special question-and-answer sessions and panel discussions. Preachers from around the world will speak in morning and evening sessions, leaving the afternoons free for sightseeing and shopping.

Pastors who would like a brief videotape of Dr. Ian Paisley, Dr. Brian Green and Dr. Bob Jones for use in promoting the Congress may request a copy from the Congress office.

For information on travel arrangements and accommodations, write World Congress of Fundamentalists, P.O. Box 34555, Greenville, SC 29614.■

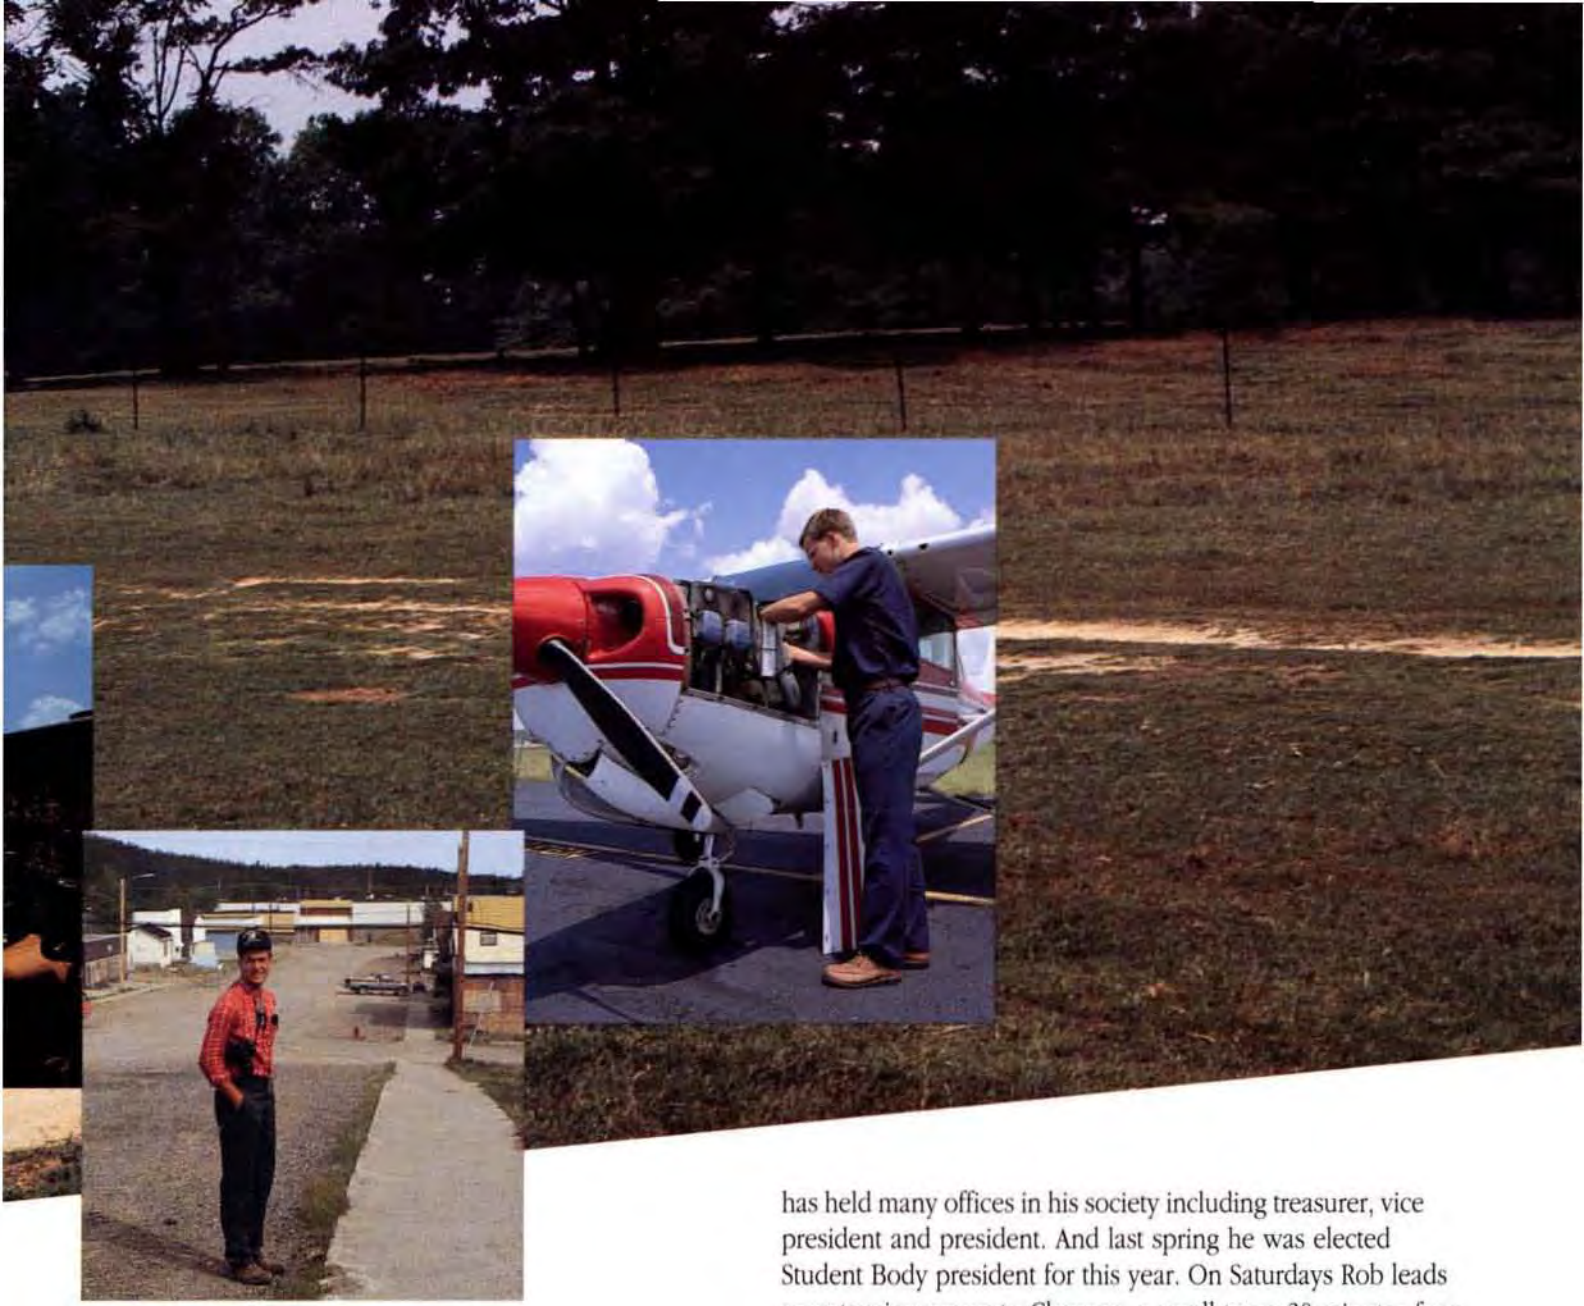
Into the jungle

The Lord provides for Rob Van Den Berg as he prepares for a ministry in aviation.

"I really feel the Lord wants me to be a missionary pilot. I want to go into the jungle, I really do. And it might sound kind of ironic, but I want to work with kids—only in a jungle environment."

When Rob Van Den Berg, a senior five-year missionary aviation major, was 13, he went to a Christian flight camp in New Jersey. "It was three hours of flight instruction. We flew around the Statue of Liberty and I loved it. That's what got me into flying."

Rob had planned to attend the Air Force Academy in Colorado, but the Lord led him to Bob Jones University instead. "I had gotten my congressional appointment to the Academy and had my interview with the Veteran Review Board and all that." But after missing the required score on the rigorous entrance exam, Rob knew the Lord was directing him away from the Academy.



After coming to the University with his parents, he decided that Bob Jones University was the place for him. "The friendliness of the people and the atmosphere, that's what got me here," he says.

Rob has already started working toward his goal to become a missionary pilot. The summer after his sophomore year Rob went on the university's Western Canada Aviation Mission Team. "I wasn't sure if I could do it because I had a good amount of money to pay. My advisor said, 'Rob, have faith in the Lord and He will provide.'"

And provide He did. "The Lord gave me above and beyond what I needed," Rob says. He sent out a letter to friends and family explaining what he wanted to do and how much money he needed. Although he needed only $1,200, he received over $3,000!

The Lord has also provided for Rob in other areas. Aside from his rigorous class schedule and work scholarship, he has held many offices in his society including treasurer, vice president and president. And last spring he was elected Student Body president for this year. On Saturdays Rob leads an extension group to Clemson, a small town 30 minutes from Greenville. They distribute gospel tracts and witness on the streets.

One of four children, Rob lives in Hackensack, N.J., where his father is a principal of a Christian school and his mother is a secretary. This past school year three Van Den Bergs attended BJU—older sister Jennifer, younger brother Jeff and Rob. "The Lord has really used my parents in my life," Rob says. "I really love and respect them; I owe them everything I have."

After graduation from the University, Rob says there's one more license he'd like to get—an inspection authorization license. Since it requires three years of experience, he plans to work for an airline or a Christian organization needing a pilot. "After that, I'll probably head for the mission field." ■

These BJU grads help troubled teens by showing them a Christian home.

A HOME THAT'S A HOME

"If you'll notice, the name is Victory Homes. Plural, because eventually, I want to have more than one."

That's the desire of Steve and Bobbi Schroeder, 1981 BJU grads, and their Victory Homes for boys in northern Wisconsin is the beginning of that dream. Started in 1983, the home grew out of a burden shared by a friend.

"I was teaching at a Christian school, and a man in our church challenged me about the need for a home for drug addicts and alcoholics," Steve says. But rather than an addict or an alcoholic, their first contact was a teenage boy, and Victory Homes exploded from there. "The Lord just opened the doors, and we went through them," Steve says. "Although we haven't had any real serious drug or alcohol cases, the boys that have come are for the most part rebellious, especially toward their parents, and still need our help."

At first the home operated in a house in a Chicago suburb, but as the home grew, so did their needs. The Lord provided a 120-acre lot with four buildings in Wisconsin. "There was no doubting the Lord's hand in providing this property," Steve says. "The guy who built it had big plans for himself, but as we look at it, we realize that the Lord had him work on it with us in mind."

The facilities include a huge house where the boys and the houseparents stay, and a house for Steve, Bobbi, and their three sons, Steven, 5, Justin, 4, and Ben, 1. There is also a school building and a barn on the mostly wooded lot.

"We set 10 boys as our limit right now," Steve says. "We don't want to become just a dormitory, and we try to stress a home philosophy; one of love, consistency and Christianity. That's the way we feel we can best reach these kids. For some reason, somewhere along the line, they've turned against their parents, and we want to try and resolve that rift."

The boys attend class at the home every day, but they get more than just book learning—practical experience is part of their education as well. When they moved into the new facilities, they were in need of much repair. "For example, our house needed plumbing work, doors, electrical work and carpet," Steve says. One of the houseparents is a licensed electrician, another a mechanic. "Any thing that needs to be fixed, they pretty much take care of it."

As the Lord has provided in sending capable people to help with Victory Homes, He has also provided financially. "We said from the beginning that we would live by faith and trust the Lord for His provision," Steve says. "Repeatedly—I should say constantly—the Lord meets our needs."

Examples of the Lord's provision read like incidents from a George Mueller book. "At one point our cupboards were nearly bare," Steve remembers. "That day an elementary class from a Christian school asked if they could come out. When they arrived, each child carried a bag of groceries which they had earned by doing odd jobs at home and school. That was 20 bags of food!"

One of the most important features of the home is the mission trip they take every year. "I like to take them to Mexico, so they can see how good they really have it," Steve says. "It's the climax of our year, and every year we've had a decision. This year we had one boy answer the call to missions and another was called to preach." While in Mexico, they pass out tracts, help the missionaries and the nationals, and even do some construction work. One year the boys helped construct a building for one of the missionaries.

"We have long-range goals, but with this ministry, you have to add a clause on to every goal—'if that's what the Lord has for us.' We'll just keep going through the doors he opens for us."■

Dear Diary

"Dear Diary,

I can't believe registration is over already. School's in full swing now, and so far I love it. Here's a rundown of yesterday's highlights:

6:30 am—Got up a few minutes early so I could have my devotions before class. We passed room inspection again; our hall leader said we have the cleanest room on the hall. Mom would never believe it!

8:00 am—Was a little nervous in my first class, History of Civilization. Everyone else was nervous, too, so I felt right at home. Our professor, Dr. Panosian, has been everywhere and seen everything, and he really knows his history. I think I'm going to like that class.

10:00 am—Dr. Bob III preached in chapel today. He's just as good as his dad, who preached the opening evangelistic services. The chapel service is so practical and down-to-earth; I think tomorrow I'll take a notebook. Oh, a really nice guy named Tim sits next to me (more on him later!)

12:00—After my freshman speech class, my roommate and I went to lunch together. I'm still amazed at how many people they can feed at one time in the Dining Common. Tomorrow I'm eating at the Snack Shop with some friends. Then I'm going on a diet—maybe.

3:00 pm—Two more classes, then I dropped by the Snack Shop to have a milkshake with a girl from back home who's now a senior. I can't believe how much she's changed in four years. Wonder what I'll be like then . . .

A day in the life of a BJU freshman girl

5:00 pm—Remember Tim, the guy who sits beside me in chapel? He called me right before supper and asked me out to lunch tomorrow. Had to tell him no, since I already have plans. "Oh well," he said, "maybe we can get together some other time." I decided not to make any more plans until I hear from him again.

10:00 pm—Got back from my work scholarship job at the library. Boy, is there a lot to learn! I love the note system around here. If a note is in the mail by 9:30, it's delivered to the door by about 10:00. Tonight three envelopes slid under our door—one was for me. Tim again! This time he asked me to the soccer games next weekend. Needless to say, I accept.

10:30 pm—Prayer group is one of my favorite times of the day. All the girls from the surrounding rooms get together to share blessings and prayer requests. It's great to be in a place where everyone is growing together. Oh, and we planned a prayer group pizza party for some time next week. So much for that diet!

10:59 pm—Well, it's almost time for lights-out, so I'd better close. Sure hope tomorrow will be as good as today. I'll let you know." ■

"I hope none of my children ever attends Bob Jones."

These words of opposition were spoken by the father of one of our graduates prior to his enrollment. Today that graduate is an effective youth director in an outstanding Western church, and his entire family has a different perspective. His parents are no longer against the "narrow-minded" fundamentalist stand the University takes.

Listen to the story in the graduate's own words:

"Throughout my four years at Bob Jones, I grew in the Lord and the Word, and I became convinced that the fundamental, separatist position was scriptural. I put my membership in a sound fundamental church while home from school one summer and served the Lord teaching and working in the youth group. Later this same church called me to be their youth pastor.

"During my senior year my folks had marital problems and were on the verge of divorce. Dad began to earnestly study Scripture, and the Lord began to work in the affairs of my family.

"In May of my senior year, my folks came to Greenville for my graduation. This was the first time for them to see the University. The things that my parents saw and heard during that first visit had a profound influence upon them. The Word and the University had won their hearts.

"In June and July, immediately after my graduation, my family started making plans to move from Colorado to Greenville to begin school that fall. This decision to pack up the family and move to Greenville to attend Bob Jones changed the whole direction of my family and saved my parents' marriage. I remember my dad saying at this time, 'I realize now it is more important to spend one's life working with people than things.' By that he meant it is people who spend eternity in heaven or hell, not things. And he desired to make people the top priority.

"That fall the family enrolled at Bob Jones. Mom and Dad took classes in the University and School of Applied Studies while my younger brother and sister attended Bob Jones Academy. In addition to this, my parents joined and became active in a fundamental church. Also, as if there were not blessings enough, my younger brother, upon graduation from the Academy, answered the Lord's call to begin preparing for the ministry at Bob Jones University.

"I am full of gratitude for the way the Lord has used Bob Jones University in my life and the lives of my family."

It is easy to surmise what the condition of this family would be today if this son had not followed the convictions he knew were Scriptural. There is a price for doing right, but there is also reward. He didn't have to wait long for his reward. It came in the form of an entire family selling out to the Lord, leaving the New Evangelical orbit and joining a fundamental church, and preparing themselves in Bob Jones University for useful service for Christ.

Perhaps some young person reading this column will decide he doesn't want to miss out on similar blessings that would lead not only to his spiritual success but to that of his family. ■

NOW ON VIDEOCASSETTE!

SPOTLIGHT ON CRIMINAL JUSTICE

BJU's criminal justice program helps train Christians for the fight against crime.

"Given the state of the world, we'll always need police officers," says Mona Dunckel, BJU criminal justice professor. "And Christians are beginning to realize this profession can be a real ministry."

That's how Kevin Fox, a senior criminal justice major from Darlington, Maryland, feels about his major. He appreciates the combination of classwork and practical experience BJU's program gives him. "I'm taking classes in criminology, police administration, police ethics, investigation, and court procedures, to name a few," Kevin says. The theory is essential, but "it's the experience that really makes the program."

"Our lab work begins the sophomore year when we're assigned as night watchmen on the campus. And during our junior year we combine dispatch work with uniform patrol experience."

Seniors participate in a two-semester internship, working at local law enforcement agencies. Leslie Harnden, a senior from Tecumseh, Michigan, recently interned with the Greenville County Sheriff's Department.

"I rode an eight-hour shift with a deputy every other week," Leslie says. "The officers explained what they were doing, let me observe, and eventually let me get involved. Many of our calls were domestic disputes, and being able to stay in control myself helped calm the situation. I learned that a lot of police work is public relations."

Leslie's internship led to an offer of a full-time deputy's position with the Sheriff's Department. "The internship opened the door for me," Leslie says. "It gave the officers an opportunity to get to know me, but more importantly, it gave me exposure to what I'll face when I work the streets."

Miss Dunckel agrees. "Our program allows our students to have a very good idea of what they're getting into. Police work is extremely high stress, and officers have one of the highest divorce rates and a higher rate of alcohol and drug use than most other professions. We're preparing officers who can deal with these problems better."

Professors in the criminal justice program bring a high level of expertise to their classrooms. "They know what they're talking about," says Kevin. Mona Dunckel, who chairs the program, has served on the Michigan Commission on Law Enforcement and is a current member of the Private Security Subcommittee of the Governor's Crime Commission in South Carolina.

Dr. Richard Hand, a Bible teacher at BJU and an attorney with a law degree from Indiana University, teaches the criminal law and constitutional law courses. Mr. Bud Rimel, BJU's Chief of Public Safety and current chairman of a subcommittee of the Governor's Crime Commission, puts his many years of experience as a certified emergency medical technician into the classes he teaches. Students complete the EMT course and take the state examination for certification, a distinct advantage when they face emergencies on the job.

Opportunities for graduates in the criminal justice field are diverse. Some choose to work with local police departments, some with federal investigative services, and others with forensics, juvenile work or private security. "I'd like to get into military police work with the Air Force," Kevin says. "But no matter where I end up, I'll be able to use what I've learned here." ■

This BJU faculty family spends their summers helping new churches get going!

ON THE FIRING LINE

James and Barb Roach spotted an empty table in the Dining Common and found themselves within earshot of Dr. Jones and Dr. Ian Paisley. The latter, with his booming voice, led the two men in prayer. One phrase he used impressed Jim powerfully: "Lord, keep us on the firing line for Christ." Jim and Barb decided to make that prayer their own. As a result, they have spent the past four summers in a ministry to help newly established fundamental churches get off the ground.

Jim and Barb weren't always so interested in Bible-believing churches. Both attended parochial schools in New York and were dedicated to Catholic traditions. Jim remembers, though, that he was inwardly searching, not even aware of what it was that he sought. In 1968 the two married, and the need for peace intensified. Within eight years, the couple had two children, but their marriage was in trouble.

At 29, they heard the gospel of Jesus Christ for the first time. Jim responded to the message in a gospel tract, and when the man who gave it to him followed up with an invitation to church, both Jim and Barb attended and went forward to profess their faith in Christ as Savior.

Their new pastor, a BJU grad, carefully shepherded the new converts. The small congregation met in one another's homes and enjoyed close fellowship and Bible study. In 1980, while meeting in a small Grange hall, the church hosted a BJU ensemble. "Through their ministry," Jim recalls, "the Lord spoke to me about getting out of my job with the government and into full-time Christian work."

Jim, who holds an undergraduate degree in physics and both a master's and a doctorate in electrical engineering, had worked for nearly 12 years as a research scientist for the U. S. Department of Defense. In 1980 he was completing his doctorate in electrical engineering from Syracuse University and wanted to use his training to benefit Christian education. He wrote to Bob Jones University and was invited to visit. The next year, Jim joined the faculty as chairman of the Department of Physics and began teaching physics and electrical engineering. Barb, who holds an undergraduate degree in education, works in the library.

When they need a break, the Roach family goes hiking. Their latest adventure was a rugged trek up Mt. Mitchell, located 90 miles from Greenville just off the Blue Ridge Parkway.

Jim and Barb delight in the Christian atmosphere they have found in the area. They are active in Mount Calvary Baptist Church, a local church that regularly sends out church planters.

A few years ago they began to feel a desire to enlarge their ministry. In 1985, they worked with the BJU mission team to Nova Scotia and volunteered part of their summer to work with pastors in New York state. Their latest summer trip included visiting five churches in four states. They and their three children—Becky, 20; Jeff, 16; and Joy, 7—asked to be put to work. They painted, visited, helped with vacation Bible school, taught Sunday school, and provided special music. Jim preached several times, and together they donated 1000 Bible tracts particularly targeted to reach Roman Catholics with the gospel message. They saw several people converted, and a highlight for them was Becky's experience of leading a lady to Christ while visiting in a hospital.

"There's only one reason a Christian remains in the world after salvation," Jim says, "and that is to be involved in a ministry." The family sacrifices in order to make their summer ministry possible, but they are more than compensated in terms of the satisfaction they gain. "There's always that one person whom the Lord has prepared," Jim says. "He gets saved, and it's all worth it." ■

College Financing Tips

by Roy Barton
Director of Financial Affairs

It's no secret that inflation has taken its toll on college tuition as well as the rest of the economy; in fact, fees for room, board and tuition at many colleges have increased at rates far beyond the actual inflation rate. While at BJU we strive to keep the increases below the rate of inflation, and are nearly always successful in doing so, many parents are beginning now to save for the educational expenses of their little ones so that, when they are ready, a Christian college education is financially feasible.

And here's some good news for them: although the new tax laws probably caused some grief for nearly every taxpayer, there is help for those wishing to invest in their children's education.

For many years, U.S. Series EE Savings Bonds have been a wise choice for parents saving money for future college expenses. If they purchased the bonds in the child's name, the interest on them, currently 7.81 percent per annum, accumulated tax-free until their redemption. Then, the interest was taxed at the child's taxing rate, presumably much lower than that of his parents, or tax-free if the child had no taxable income in the year redeemed.

But for Series EE Bonds issued after 1989, there is a complete tax exemption if several conditions are met. The Technical Corrections and Miscellaneous Revenues Act of 1988, basically a correction of minor problems in the tax reform package, was passed by Congress to both increase tax revenues and give some social benefits. One of these benefits is a tax exemption for interest earned on savings bonds used for tuition.

According to the act, no interest will be charged, during the life of the bond or upon its redemption, if the bond is used to fund a college education for the taxpayer, his spouse or his dependents.

Of course, as with most tax breaks, there are several stipulations. First, the bond must be a Series EE Bond issued after 1989. Second, it must be issued to an individual at least 24 years of age, or jointly to that taxpayer and his spouse.

If, upon redemption of the bond, the principal and interest are greater than the annual tuition and fees for the student, the excess will be taxed at normal rates. And, if the joint adjusted gross income of the parents is over $60,000, the exemption is phased out gradually. For families whose income is over $90,000, no exemption will apply. (These figures will be adjusted for cost-of-living increases beginning in 1991.)

So for most families trying to get a head start and begin saving for future educational expenses, the Series EE Bonds are an excellent choice, but be sure to check with your accountant or a competent tax advisor before taking any action.
